Upstream Thinking is a project funded by South West Water that aims to improve water quality and water resource management and improve natural habitats.

Devon Wildlife Trust and Westcountry Rivers Trust farm advisors will be working with landowners and managers to tackle issues including soil compaction and erosion, nutrient and pesticide run-off, and flooding. Addressing these issues not only has benefits to water quality, but they also provide many on-farm benefits too, such as improved grass productivity and animal health, and economic savings.
